

NEWPORT,

BY CRANSTON & NORMAN,

127 THAMES STREET.

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 26, 1851.

The Town Council of this town make a contract, each year, with one of the papers, to publish the laws which they may make during the year; the contract is given to the one which will do it the lowest. We think that the laws should be published in all the papers, particularly since the Council have undertaken to effect what they entitle important reforms in the government. Of course, persons have their preferences for papers, and there are probably not many families who take all the papers; consequently, but few can see or know what the laws are, especially if they are published in but one paper, and that a weekly. Personally, we care nothing about the matter, as the room which they would occupy in our own paper, if they were published here, would yield us at least five times the amount in other advertisements—and we never have any room to spare. But as far as the public are concerned, it is all important that they should know what the laws are; and it is their right to know.

If laws are to be made by the Council for the government of the people of the town, the people ought to know what they are, so that they may conform to them; and they ought to have the opportunity of reading those laws through the columns of all the papers. The people pay the expense of printing the laws, and they should have the benefit of reading them, generally. We make these remarks at the suggestion of several persons who desire to know what laws are in force, and who do not wish to run after any particular paper, to ascertain what they are. All laws should have the greatest possible publicity; this would very materially aid in securing a good and efficient government.

Young at the Park Saloon, receives fresh nice Cherries every morning; they are unusually large and very sweet. Give him a call and try them.

The Spanish Minister, Mr. Calderon, has taken the house on the Garrison farm, in the south part of the town for the season.

We learn that Jenny Lind has engaged a Cottage on the hill, which she will occupy during a portion of the summer.

The Washington Republic, in noticing the report that Mr. Conrad, Secretary of War, intended to resign, says—"It has no foundation in truth or its semblance;" but that it has "good reason to know that none of the Cabinet have any thought of resigning."

In the New York Senate the Naval Bill has been ordered to a third reading.

The Emperor of Russia, so far from opposing the circulation of the Scriptures in his dominions, generously remitted, at one time, duties charged upon 20,000 bibles sent into St. Petersburg, amounting to £200. The British and Foreign Bible Society having an agency in the Russian capital, which has been actively engaged for years in scattering bibles and testaments without molestation, either from the government or from others. The total issue of this agency up to the 9th of February, 1850, amounted to 254,000 copies.

Coincidence.—It is a curious coincidence that the great fire in San Francisco broke out on the anniversary of what was then called "the great fire" in 1850. The wealthiest part of California was laid in ruins one year previous to the terrible disaster of which news has just reached us.

A DESPERATE REOLVE.—The Lockport Daily Courier says: "There is a legend that a merchant once determined to ruin himself by squandering his money in advertising; but he found that the more he advertised the richer he grew until at last he was obliged to give up in despair of ever effecting his purpose in that way."

Marabout said of a man who was extremely fat, that God had created him only to show to what point the human skin could stretch without breaking.

The U. S. District Court for this district and where are we?—Commonwealth.

Some of you, at least, in the State Prison, we suppose.—West Adt.

3 days later from Europe.

HALIFAX, June 24—9:30 A.M.
The steamship Europa, Capt. Lett, arrived in her dock at quarter before 9, this morning.

She brought ninety-two passengers, sixty-seven for Boston. No specific on freight.

She experienced strong head winds, and had not a square sail set during the passage.

Arrived at midnight on the 14th, off the Maidens, a large vessel supposed to be the Africa.

The Europa sailed from Liverpool at half-past eleven on the 14th.

The Franklin arrived at Cowes on Thursday morning, the 12th. The Lafayette was to sail on Monday, the 17th, the City of Glasgow the day following. Berth in both vessels full. The Atlantic was to sail on the 23rd, and the Great Britain to be got ready for sea very early in September.

ENGLAND.

The domestic news is very dull—the files received are all barren of interest. Parliament had re-assembled. The army and navy estimates had been voted, including £300,000 for Califir war expences. Antley's motion respecting State prisoners at Van Dieman's Land was withdrawn. The new measure for Chancery reform had been introduced. Doubts were entertained that Government would proceed with the Ecclesiastical bill.

The Exhibition still attracted large numbers. The working classes had not visited it as numerously as was anticipated. They would do so on reduction of the admission fee.

Emigration continues unabated. The Galway people are rejoicing at the prospect of having steam communication between their ports and the United States.

Dr. Hughes, Archbishop of New York has been entertained by the Catholics of Liverpool with a grand banquet.—His speech delivered on the occasion, it is said, can hardly fail to command considerable attention on both sides of the Atlantic.

FRANCE.

Affairs in France are tranquil. The conditions for the revision of the Constitution have been completed. Of the fifteen members seven are for a revision, and six are against any revision whatever; and two, M. De Tocqueville and Odilon Barrot, will vote for a revision under certain circumstances. The Duke De Broglie has been appointed President of the Chamber of Deputies.

The war in Algiers was over, and has resulted in the suppression of the rebellion.

Commerce and trade improving.—Bourse closed brisk.

ABOUT two o'clock, on a December night when the thermometer stood in the neighborhood of zero, a party of wags hailed a farm house in a very boisterous manner. The farmer sprang out of bed, draw on a few articles of clothing, and ran out to see what was wanted, when the following interesting dialogue occurred;

"Have you any hay, Mr. —?"

"Plenty of it sir."

"Have you plenty of corn?"

"Yes."

"Any oats?"

"Yes."

"Plenty of meat and breadstuffs?"

"Yes."

"Well, we are very glad to hear it; for they are useful things in a family."

The party then drove off, leaving the farmer to his reflections.

The lady of a physician at Claremont, N. H., appeared in the streets a few days since in the Bloomer costume—the frock so ridiculously short as to excite general laughter. She went into the weave-room of one of the mills, and was escorted off the premises by the "ghoul's band," composed of female weavers, playing popular airs on the boxwood shuttle.

The late rains throughout Louisiana have greatly resuscitated the cotton crop, and a large yield is anticipated.

SIGULAR INSCRIPTION.—The following epitaph is inscribed upon a slate tombstone in the burial ground in Sterling, in this country:

"Her anxious friends stood weeping round,

While sic on a bed of sickness lay,

No medicine could get down,

She sot a word to them 'twould say."

The anxious friends certainly did a good thing in exonerating the doctors. In many instances, it is difficult to imagine a case in which a doctor, in a fever, is not the remedial measures had not been tried.—Worcester Spy.

Archbishop Hughes came passing in the Arctic.

Next to London, Liverpool is now the pride of England, and some of the boastful of these Anglo Saxons claim that it will eventually eclipse New York. I am inclined to think that they and those of us, who find great hopes upon the future greatness of New York, are doomed to utter disappointment. I believe that within fifty years New York will have fallen to the condition of a second or third rate mart, while Liverpool will have shrank from her present boastful two hundred and thirty thousand population, into her meagre measure at the outset of the century. The mind of man, which ordinarily defers to nature, but which has got beyond mere adaptation, intends to transfer its power to other points. Neither New York or Liverpool have sufficient water in their channels to meet the views that are now in embryo. As soon as it is proven that comparative strength can be carried out with size, steamships will be built of ten thousand tons burthen, they will carry a thousand first class passengers, and they will cross the ocean in six days. Norfolk and Newport, which have sixty feet of water, will then be the great ports of the United States, and Southampton will be the commercial entrepot of Great Britain.

There is nothing repugnant to the simplest calculation in this idea. The whole view rests upon the question of comparative strength with increased size in steamships. It is the common notion that monster vessels are not safe, but while this is the common notion, science, which is never deceived by popular fancy, has been quietly increasing the size of ships until the vessels of the Collin's line exceed the size of the President and Great Britain. Science will increase them larger still, though obliged to fit them with refined steel and line their enormous sides with double engines. The ocean travel will be squared and ordered like lines upon the land; these new monsters of the deep will lie steadily upon the great bed of the ocean, beneath the motions of the waves, or that surface agitation, the greatest height of which has been ascertained to be only twenty-five feet, with an average of eighteen. This will veto sea-sickness; large saloons will take the place of ocean cells and coffins, luxury, safety and utility will be united, and those who enjoy these combined advantages will look back with surprise to the time when a world of one thousand millions of inhabitants were content to make their travel, and conduct their exchanges, in little acrons, of one spread broad sheets of woven goods to catch the chance breezes of the ocean as their only means of motion.—London Correspondent of New York Police Gazette.

IMPORTANT TO OWNERS OF FISHING VESSELS.—In a case which was recently decided by Judge Woodbury, in the U. S. Circuit Court, a point of law, which has considerable importance to owners of fishing vessels, was incidentally ruled upon. The suit was brought by the skipper, against the owner of a Beverly schooner, to recover his share of fish and wages on a voyage which was discontinued on account of the unseaworthiness of the schooner. There is an act of Congress which provides that the skipper of a vessel to be employed in the cod fishery shall make an agreement in writing with every fisherman who may be employed therein, "which agreement shall be endorsed or countersigned by the owner of such fishing vessel or his agent."

The fishing agreement in this case was not so endorsed at the commencement of the voyage, and in point of fact, was not endorsed by the owner until after the suit was brought. It was contended that this neglect to comply with the act of Congress, brought the case within the provisions of an act passed in 1819, in which it is declared that all shipments made contrary to an act of Congress shall be void, and that the seamen may leave at any time, and demand the highest rate of wages for the time they have served.

The case was decided on other ground, but Judge Woodbury, as well as Judge Sprague, intimated that it would be prudent, and might be necessary, for the owner to countersign or endorse the fishing agreement.—Salem Obs.

DOUBLE DUEL.—The Prince of Gaudio and Count Rossi recently exchanged a couple of shots at Versailles—the first at thirty and the second at fifteen paces. There was no blood drawn. The duel gave rise to another, with small swords, by Count Necker and Pierre Bonaparte, in which the former was wounded in the thigh. Prince Gaudio and Pierre Bonaparte are sons of Lucien, brother of the Emperor.
